Szymon Szymczakowski is one of the managing partners of MorFokus Consulting Inc. He currently lives in Victoria, British Columbia. Szymon is passionate about taking on complex challenges. As a consultant with MorFokus, he has successfully managed large-scale service transition, business windup, clinic development, deployment, and global health system business development projects.

Szymon has a wealth of experience and expertise from his past work within federal and provincial health systems. His accomplishments include supporting the implementation of innovative interdisciplinary primary care and acute care programs for remote Indigenous communities, developing, and overseeing provincial primary care networks, and investigating patient care quality.

Apart from that, he also works as a freelancer Subject Matter Expert and supports the Dubai Government Excellence Program with his facilitation and assessment skills. He adds value to the program by using his extensive knowledge of international health system best practices.

In his early career, Szymon was an advanced care paramedic with experience in urban, rural, aeromedical, and industrial operations. Throughout his life journey, Szymon has identified how non-verbal communication can improve the quality of patient-centric care and incorporates this into his keynote and public speaking engagements.

As a serial entrepreneur, Szymon manages MorFokus's operations. He holds an Executive MBA in Global Leadership, which gives him an edge in managing the company's diverse projects. For fun, Szymon loves to travel with his wife and kids; their last trip took them to eight countries spanning three continents.
